On their Way to the Pacific Round the Horn.

Effect of the Long and Short Haul Clause—The Inter-State Law.

The San Francisco Bulletin of the 28th ult., in referring to the continental tea trade, says: When the announcement was made, some few weeks ago, that the traffic arrangement existing between the Pacific Coast Steamship Company and the Canadian Pacific was shortly to terminate, it was generally believed by the railroad people that the efforts of the northern line to disturb California freight rates would shortly cease. Governor Perkins R was said, declined to continue any longer a certain contract which he had entered into with the Canadian Pacific, and by means of which the new overland line was enabled to make excessively low rates in competition with the American lines, and these, by a roundabout way, to points directly in the territory of the big transcontinental railroads. The immense quantities of freight which General Traffic Manager Olds expected would come over the Canadian Pacific when once the long and short haul clause of the interstate law was in operation was the inducement which persuaded the Pacific Coast steamer line to grant such low terms.

THE INTERSTATE LAW.

Once, however, the Interstate Commissioners' decision on this knotty point was made known, Governor Perkins realised that his hopes, as well as those of the Canadian Pacific, were not destined to realization. His communication to Geo. Olds, giving notice of his intention of terminating the contract on existing terms, followed almost immediately. The managers of the Canadian Pacific, however, had foreseen such a possibility, and, like clever business men had taken measures to guard against their total exclusion from the Pacific coast trade, which would undoubtedly have followed increased charges by the steamer company. About three months ago a Canadian Pacific agent went to Antwerp and purchased there six large and handsome steamers, the property of a large shipping firm which had recently gone insolvent. These steamers were used in the trade between Antwerp and Mediterranean ports, and were sumptuously fitted up besides being of first-class build and speed. The Canadian Pacific agent secured the whole fleet, and two of them laden with a cargo of fancy merchandise, are now on their way to this city by way of Cape Horn. On their arrival the Canadian Pacific will be practically independent of the Pacific Coast or any other steamship company, will be able to quote whatever rates it pleases to any point on its lines, and will undoubtedly be in a most favorable position to handle California as well as Pacific coast business.

HANDSOME STEAMERS.

Jacob Bergmann, of Davis Bros., Toklas & Co., of Sutter street, said in conversation with a reporter, that he had heard of the line during his recent visit to Europe. The steamers, he said, were a little larger than those of the Oregon Railway and Navigation Co. He could not say to which portion of the coast the new steamers would trade, his information not extending that far. The two steamers were loading at Antwerp when he left, and there is an effort being made to secure cargoes for the rest. There can be no doubt, however, but that the steamers will trade between San Diego and Vancouver in the direct interests of the Canadian Pacific. They cannot, of course, unless entered in the name of an American firm, do any interport business, nor interfere with the passenger traffic between this city and Portland or Los Angeles, but undoubtedly just as soon as the steamers are put on, the Canadian Pacific will make more strenuous efforts than ever to secure a share of the Pacific Coast business.

THE TEA TRADE.

The latest statistical reports from Yokahama show that the trans-Pacific tea trade is gradually growing in volume, and that it now exceeds by many millions of pounds the shipments made to New York by the Suez Canal. Gradually the trans-Pacific and transcontinental routes have grown in favor until now the combined shipments to the United States and Canada far exceed in volume those reaching there by the Suez Canal. The new steamer line of the Canadian Pacific is destined to reduce very considerably the residum now remaining for the contrasted export figures, for the present figures show not only an increase in the total of trans-Pacific shipments, but also a fast falling off in the shipments by British steamers to Canada. The total amount of tea transported during the present season to the United States and Canada is 18,418,448 pounds, an increase over the corresponding period of last year of 1,365,227 pounds. Of this large total only 4,725,554 pounds reached the United States and Canada by the Suez Canal. Of the amounts shipped to New York 5,650,682 pounds reached there across the continent and 3,411,860 pounds by the Suez Canal. In 1886 the transcontinental shipments amounted to 4,211,422 pounds, as against 2,505,741 pounds which arrived by the Suez Canal

CANADIAN PACIFIC COMPETITION.

It is interesting to notice the accounts of the Canadian Pacific shipments. By the initial steamer, the Abyssinia, there were 1,809,628 pounds for the United States, while in the second steamer, the Parthia, which left Yokahama on June 20th, there were 1,630,345 pounds for U. S. ports, a very good showing it would seem for the Canadian line. The Canadian Pacific's opposition is, of course, bringing down freights. The Oceanic's cargo was taken at 2 cents, while that of the Rio de Janeiro was taken at 1¾ cts. This same rate is in force for the Gaelic, which leaves on the 20th, while for the Canadian Pacific's steamer, Port Augusta, which left Yokahama on the 13th inst., the rate was 1½ cents to overland cities.

Cruelty to Animals.

Three calves that arrived by the Sound steamer on Saturday night were permitted to remain on the wharf until Monday morning without food and only with brackish water to drink.

Details of Boulanger-Ferry Duel ---Figirt at 20 Paces.

A Report About the Pacific Steamship Subsidy.

MUST HAVE BLOOD.

PARIS, August 2.—The seconds of ex-Premier Ferry and those of Boulanger have decided a duel is necessary.

Boulanger's seconds publish the report of what they say transpired at the conference between them and the seconds of Ferry. The report is in substance as follows: Gen. Boulanger desires a serious reparation, one proportionate to the gravity of Ferry's affront. On this account he proposed that the combatants exchange shots until one was hit, the choice of distance to be left to the seconds of Ferry. These conditions being accepted, Boulanger's seconds agreed to be content with an exchange of shots between the principals at twenty paces without any word of command. Considering this proposal to embody the extreme limit of General Boulanger's formal instructions, his seconds did not feel authorized to make any further proposition. Ferry's seconds would only accept a duel at twenty-five paces, with a single exchange of shots, the fire to be opened at a word of command. Thereupon as the offended party has the right to dictate the conditions of a duel without being obliged to submit to the terms dictated by the adversary's seconds, Boulanger's seconds withdrew from the affair.

MURDER INTENDED

By a Couple of Redskins on the West Coast Last Week.

From Mr. J. J. Hardy, who accompanied Messrs. Martin and Fox on the prospecting tour along the west coast and who also witnessed the shooting last week, furnishes the following additional particulars of the affair. He followed the retreating Indians but a short distance. On his return he set at once to work to render assistance to his wounded companions. He watched them during the night. His only light was a candle which he kept concealed fearing the return of the Indians and that his movements would be observed through the canvas of the tent. On the following morning he started for the Indian village, where he supposed the government agent lived. He had to pull fourteen miles against wind and tide. Fox steered the boat; he kept up wonderfully well considering his wounds. Martin lay in the bottom of the boat complaining and moaning from the effects of his wounds. On arriving at a point, some distance from Ahousett, the Indian Agent was sent for. He was not long in responding to the call, and bringing medicine with him. He then arranged for securing a large canoe and Indians to bring the wounded men to the city. Mr. Hardy so minutely described the two Indian boys who committed the offence that they were readily found. When the canoe came to where they were camped the boy Tommy was in it in charge of an Indian officer. On the way to Victoria, and within two miles of Cloyoquot, a canoe was overtaken with Charley in it in charge of another officer. Ample provisions were taken on board to bring the party to this city. The journey took four days steady pulling. The wounded men and the prisoners, in charge of the Indian police officers, were all in one canoe. After enduring many hardships they reached this harbor on the evening of Saturday last, as already announced. The Indians stole a double-barrelled gun and an axe belonging to the prospecting party. These were recovered and brought back. The gun is now in the hands of the police.

They prospected a large tract of country, but without any success. Of provisions and supplies they had abundance, having behind them at the spot where the shooting took place sufficient to carry them through for a few months yet. Mr. Hardy is unable to explain the motive the cowardly bucks had in view in shooting as they did. He describes the west coast Indians as friendly in some sections and hostile in others.

Going Ahead Rapidly.

Mr. Robert Kerr, general traffic manager of the C. P. R., on his return to Winnipeg to a press representative said that Vancouver was going ahead rapidly. A large number of handsome brick blocks are built and others are in course of erection and ultimately a big town will cover this magnificent site. Business, that is our business, is brisk, and passenger traffic is booming at the Glacier Hotel, at the Big Glacier, the number of guests being so large that sleeping accommodation was taxed beyond its capacity, and General Supt. Whyte has had to send up a sleeping car to accommodate the overflow. The culinary and dining departments are, however, fully equal to the strain. The day he passed through Banff one hundred and fifteen persons had bathed in the hot springs, so you may judge of the number staying there, and the new bathes that have just been bathers had turned out. The number of tourists this year is very large and business on the railway is booming.

For Alaska.

The S. S. Ancon left the outer wharf shortly after 3 o'clock this afternoon, after loading a large quantity of merchandise for Cassiar and 42,000 pounds of machinery for the Treadwell mine in Alaska. This machinery was shipped from the east over the C. P. R. From here she will proceed to Port Townsend to load San Francisco goods, leaving that port to-morrow at noon with a full cargo for Alaska direct. Her passenger list is also full, principally with excursionists, who are on an outing to view the country and place where the manufacture of icebergs goes hourly on. Among her passengers are, W S Ladd, wife, two children and servant, Mrs H J Corbett, two children and servant, H A Elliott and wife, Mrs E S Tupper, all of Portland, Oregon; Dr Thos Fraser and daughter, Oakland, Cal; Mr Duncan, Metlakahtla, B C; and Harry Heywood of this city. A large number will join her at Port Townsend.

In Brief and to the Point.

Dyspepsia is dreadful. Disordered liver is misery. Indigestion is a foe to good nature.

The human digestive apparatus is one of the most complicated and wonderful things in existence. It is easily put out of order.

Greasy food, tough food, sloppy food, bad cookery, mental worry, late hours, irregular habits, and many other things which ought not to be, have made the American people a nation of dyspeptics.

But Green's August Flower has done a wonderful work in reforming this sad business and making the American people so healthy that they can enjoy their meals and be happy.

Remember! No happiness without health. But Green's August Flower brings health and happiness to the dyspeptic. Ask your druggist for a bottle. Seventy-five cents.

Mr. Duncan's Return.

Mr. W. Duncan, of Metlakahtla, who has been in the Eastern States for about a year endeavoring to procure land in Alaska from the U. S. Government and authority to move thereto his Indian followers at Metlakahtla, left for that place to day on the steamer Ancon. Mr. Duncan was reticent about the result of his prolonged visit to the United States, but it is generally understood that while he secured much sympathy and promises of support from private individuals, the government declined to countenance his propositions.

Moonlight Excursion.

The members of St. Andrews and Caledonian society, to the number of two or three hundred, participated in the excursion on board the Yosemite to Rose Rocks and return last night. The Queen City band discoursed choice music during the trip, and the company enjoyed themselves in dancing, promenading the spacious decks and parlors, and supper on the financial result also proved very satisfactory.

POLITICAL AND PERSONAL.

A statute passed at the last session of the Quebec Legislature relating to the Lieut.-Governor has been disallowed, on the ground that only the Dominion parliament has power to legislate in regard to the office of Lieut.-Governor.

The Toronto Mail says there is little doubt that Mr. D. McIntyre will carry South Renfrew for the Liberals. Mr. Peter Ryan, of Toronto, it also says, was first offered the nomination but declined the honor. This statement lacks confirmation.

The last tie between the Federal Government and its old organ, the Toronto Mail, has been severed. Hon. Mr. Chapleau before his departure issued orders to the effect that the paper should no longer receive the Canada Gazette notes in advance, a privilege it has in common with all government papers, hitherto enjoyed.

The Toronto News describes the eviction, in Toronto, of a lot of poor people from miserable houses for which the tenants either could not or would not pay rent. The miserable belongings of the unfortunate people were thrown into the street, and the evicted were, at last accounts, camping in the open air in a filthy lane.

Every indication points to a terrific war between France and Germany before long, but it would puzzle the wisest man on earth to point out in what respect the struggle in t6 result in gain to the individual Frenchman or German, no matter how it may eventuate. When these who make the quarrels are the only ones to fight there will be very few national wars.

The rumor that Norquay will shortly dissolve the Manitoba Legislature and appeal to the country on his railroad policy gains credence in Winnipeg. Norquay has shown himself a pretty astute leader and a copyist of Sir John in many things. There is no earthly necessity for an appeal to the people on this question, but Norquay thinks that he might strengthen himself on other questions. Parties are pretty evenly divided in the House.

The election in South Renfrew takes place to-day. The friends of both candidates are confident of a victory. Mr. Duncan McIntyre is the Liberal and Mr. Ferguson the Conservative candidate. The riding is a fickle one, both parties being very evenly divided. Since 1872 it has been represented by Conservatives as well as Liberals. At the last general election Mr. Campbell, the deceased member, was elected by a majority of 66. The riding has been swarming with political missionaries from both sides. A close contest is expected.

Concerning the rumor that the Globe was to become the organ of the conservative party in Canada, that journal says: The ingenious minor journalists who are trying to serve certain tangled ends of their own by starting yarns about the Globe becoming a C. P. R. organ, or this or that organ, may as well save their breath to cool their porridge. The Globe is the one journal in Canada in a position to be, in the future as in the past, absolutely independent and outspoken. At no period in its history has its circulation been so great, its advertising so extensive, its prosperity so marked, its enterprise and influence so wide-reaching; while, if letters from subscribers are any criterion, never were its hosts of friends more cordial in their goodwill.

The great objection to commercial union will unquestionably turn out to be, as Mr. Bright says, the tendency it would have to a weakening of the ties that bind Canada to the mother country. An adoption of the American tariff against England and the world, and at the same time free trade with the United States, would be a declaration that we favored non-intercourse with Great Britain, which would ultimately lead to independence or annexation. The only other alternative is the adoption of the Canadian tariff, or a modification of the two tariffs, by the United States, which would not be considered as specially objectionable in England. But it must be evident to our politicians that Canada has gone as far as it is safe to go in raising the wall between Great Britain and this country.

London Advertiser: The sovereignty of the United States no more extends over the Behring Sea than does the sovereignty of Russia. The Russians own the Asiatic and the United States the American coast, but they are separated from each other by 2,000 miles of ocean, and we think the civilized world is not likely to submit to the pretention of sovereignty on the part of either Russia or the United States over these waters. There would be as much propriety in China or the United States claiming the sovereignty of the Northern Pacific ocean. Russia made some claim to the sovereignty of Behring's sea 60 years ago, and her pretensions were energetically resisted by John Quincy Adams, and since that time no pretension has been put forward until the Alaska Sealing Company have ventured to do so, and they inflicted serious damage upon certain Canadian fisherman under these absurd pretensions.

BEYOND HIS DEPTH.

Our morning contemporary has got beyond his depth on the water works question, and is floundering about in a desperate manner in a sea of perplexity and figures. The immediate point in dispute is the height of the Pandora street reservoir, and our stupid friend has this morning convicted himself of crass ignorance on the subject by one of his own witnesses. Coun. HIGGINS gives as a reason for opposing the reservoir scheme, that a late survey has exposed blunders in the report of Mr. HENDRY, (which was endorsed by Mr. PICKERING), in regard to the levels of the lower reservoir. Mr. PICKERING in his report says the top water altitude of the reservoir would be 135 feet, and Mr. HENDRY said the same. Coun. HIGGINS, and every other members of the council, is aware that in order to make the reservoir conform to the grade of the street, it was proposed to build it seven feet lower, or at a top altitude of 128 feet. In ignoring this alteration in the plan, Coun. HIGGINS is deliberately attempting to deceive. Now, having in mind this fact, the report of Mr. A. E. MACKAY, published in this morning's Colonist, will be found to substantiate the reports of Messrs. HENDRY and PICKERING. Mr. MACKAY finds the level of the floor excavated to be 115.85 feet over high water mark. To these figures add 12 feet for depth of water and 7 feet for alteration in level, and we have "a top water altitude" of 134.85 feet, or within a fraction of two inches of Mr. HENDRY's figures. Mr. MACKAY is the best witness yet brought forward to prove that HENDRY's calculations are correct.

THE TREASURERSHIP.

Mr. J. H. TURNER is at present rusticating in the country. It is believed he got overheated during the late paper carnival in this city, and from its effects he is now suffering. He is a guest with mine host STEVENS on the North Saanich road. Mr. TURNER, we are pleased to learn, is rapidly improving under the kind attention given him by Mr. STEVENS, and the absolute relaxtion from business he is enjoying. On Saturday he was visited by the Hon. JOHN ROBSON, with whom he is said to have been closeted for some considerable time. The political situation and outlook was seriously discussed. The acceptance of the Treasurership portfolio was again pressed on Mr. TURNER by his visitor, who was most persistent in his efforts to induce the member for Victoria to consent. No definite decision was arrived at, so that it may be said that the Treasurership is now going a-begging. The last ditch, however, has not yet been reached. It is known that Mr. TURNER has longing eyes on the coveted position, but the dread of having to appeal to the electors for an endorsation of his conduct is an ordeal through which he is somewhat reluctant to pass. Meantime Mr. D. W. HIGGINS is beholding the play on the political chess board with a keen eye, thoroughly enjoying the corner into which the government has been driven. For the treachery and base ingratitude meted out to him by the leaders of the party he claims to have built up and kept together, he is now nursing his wrath and keeping it warm, to be poured out at an early date on the heads of those against whom he has vowed eternal vengeance. The battle to be inaugurated between these arch political conspirators will be an interesting one to on-lookers. It may not result in a victory for the weak and down trodden, or that the fittest will survive; nevertheless, the revelations to be made will, it is to be hoped, lead to honest men being rewarded for their good works, and those of the opposite school treated to their just deserts. Verily the governmental family is not to be envied in its alleged unity and happiness.

POLITICIANS CHANGE.

Whilst in Winnipeg a few days since the Hon. THOMAS WHITE, Minister of the Interior, was interviewed by a journalist to ascertain his views on the questions of Commercial Union and Reciprocity. Mr. WHITE expressed himself as opposed to the former but in favor of unrestricted reciprocity. It is not many years since this gentleman was an unflinching opponent of an advance in the Canadian tariff, as the following extract from a speech delivered by him at the Dominion Board of Trade, Montreal, will testify. Discussing the probability of an advance in the customs tariff in 1873, Mr. WHITE said:

A 15 per cent. tariff ought to be sufficient for any industry suited to the country, and as to others it would be unwise to attempt to sustain them by fiscal props. I warn my Protectionist friends against provoking the controversies to which a 20 per cent. tariff would give rise. The very discussion of it, the very attacks which it would provoke, would do more to unsettle manufacturing industry and drive capital from being invested in it, than any good results that could flow from it.

Since then the gentleman who thus spoke so warmly and emphatically has become one of the most zealous advocates of a tariff ranging from 25 to 60 per cent. He, like many another politician, will favor Commercial Union, if the populace declare for it—rather than lose his seat on the Treasury benches.

The Parsees of Bombay have long been famous for their charitable munificence, and the example of the late Sir Jamsetjee Jejeebhoy, known thoughout the civilized world for his liberality, is being emulated at the present day by another Parsee, Sir Dinshaw Manockjee Petit, Sheriff of Bombay, who has just offered the Government of Bombay one and one half lakh ($75,000), for the purpose of establishing a female college in that city.

A JOURNEY.

I know not whitherward my soul is set—
One straight, dark path all life's horizon fills,
Tho' still far off the unwavering blessed hills
Flame gold and purple where the sun has met
Their jubilant upturned faces, and even yet
Laughs the lush meadow bright with daffodils,
Laugh the green valleys with their hurrying rills,
And smile the angels o'er heaven's parapet.

One straight, dark path * * * and these things are so fair? * * *
Might I but climb the mountain's gleaming height,
Dream in the valleys, joy in the sweet light
Of playing angel eyes * * *. soul, ask not where
Life's dark path leadeth thro' the gathering night,
But if at ending God and heaven prove there!
—Evelyn Payne in The Academy.

A GENDARME'S STORY.

In the autumn of 18— we found ourselves, at an elevation of 1,900 meters, in the Chalet of Tranbelane. It was well that we were sheltered, for a tempest raged on the outside, sweeping and howling through the mountain passes and hurling itself with fury upon the pines of the Swiss Jura. Gathering about the fire, like the rest of us, for warmth and comfort, the herdsmen smoked and listened while we talked.

Suddenly a violent knocking sounded upon the door, and, on the call to enter, given by the shepherd, who was master of the hut, a Vaudois gendarme, wet and weary, a black canishe following at his heels, showed himself in the opening. Placing his capote and carbine in a corner with the rest of the trappings, he explained to us that he, too, had been surprised by the storm and for several hours lost in the pines. As the light of the burning logs fell upon the new arrival I started in astonishment, for never in my life before had I seen so strange a countenance. The nose was broken and bent awry, the teeth entirely missing from the front of the mouth, and the skin and flesh a patchwork of seams and cicatrices. Nevertheless, in spite of its disfigurements, the face was a kind one, the face of an old and brave soldier.

The conversation, checked for a moment by his coming, was renewed again, the painful duty of the mountain guards, the tragic story of contrabandists, forming the basis of our talk. Every one had something to relate, and when it came to the turn of the gendarme, cheered by frequent trips to his gourd and the grateful warmth of the fire, he gave us the following history:

"That which I am going to tell you," said he, "is the saddest episode of my life, for I was but 25 years of age, and, without flattering myself, a well set boy. Detailed to the post of Cure—the extreme station of the canton of Vaud, near the Fort des Rousses—in the winter of 18—, I endured some terrible sufferings, every day of my life exposed to the danger and hardships of that open frontier and the forests of Amont. Ah, those miserable smugglers, whose route I had to watch! Many a night have I passed in a hole in the rocks or in the branches of the pines in those trackless woods where one only meets with crows and poisonous reptiles!

"But to return to my story: One afternoon the corporal came to me and said: 'Abram, this evening the little Francois and his two dogs of brothers will just themselves at Des Rousses; they will be obliged to return through the hollows of Cronaz. I am going to post myself behind them, the lieutenant under the Vermillay, and you in the hollow itself. As you have a longer route than we, you must start at once and take Bijou with you. Come, hurry up, boy; this trip requires nerve.'

"Bijou, to whom the corporal referred, was the canishe of the post; there was nothing like him to scent the smugglers, and moreover, to tell the truth, he had once been a contraband himself, having served to pass jewelry and clock works, concealed under his hair, through the lines into France.

"I had found him after a brawl, wounded and bleeding; had cared for and cured him; and since then he had never left me. By 4 o'clock I was on the road. The ground was covered with snow, and at every step I sank to my knees in spite of my snow shoes. The carbine slung across my shoulders, the sword at my waist, my heavy capote and Alpenstock did not render me light of weight, I assure you. But I went on with a brave heart in spite of my difficulties, pleased with the thought of measuring my strength in open fight with this terrible Petit Francois, who daily defied our watchfulness, and on Sunday openly walked with the girls of the neighborhood. He did it to make us envious, for the villain knew that we were not made of stone, and with an income of only thirty cents a day from the government not likely to be looked upon with favor.

"When I think of him, that scamp with his pockets full of gold, and jewels enough to tempt even the virgin of Notre Dame d'Arzier, my blood boils, and—but listen, gentlemen, listen to the end.

"I had already been traveling for over two hours, when at last I approached the hollow of Cronaz, a narrow defile between the Noir Mont and Mont Sallez, a mere goat's path, in fact; to the right of it a fearful precipice, to the left a polished wall—and what a height—not less than 1,000 metres!

"Imagine for yourselves the cold and the gloom of those interminable forests, with their centenary pines, whose trunks were mossed with age, whose branches bent and cracked under the weight of snow—and not a soul save myself in the whole of that icy solitude! I walked perhaps 100 feet into the defile, then seated myself in the snow to smoke. The night was clear and bright, but I smoked with composure, for I knew perfectly well that the smugglers would remain at Des Rousses until 10 o'clock at least, in order to arrive at Begnins about daybreak.

"By this time, the cold beginning to affect me, I was growing very drowsy, when suddenly my attention was attracted by the strange behavior of Bijou. He had burrowed into a pile of snow heaped against the wall of the hollow, and instead of squatting himself quietly on his haunches, as was his habit, was digging, scratching and sniffing about the excavation as if seeking to unearth a treasure.

"'I must see what he is about,' I said to myself; 'there's something suspicious over there.' And leaning my carbine against the rocks, I took off my sword and began to dig in the hole at which Bijou was still pawing. Ah, but it was funny, for suddenly, something giving way beneath us, we fell and were buried out of sight, a great pile of snow and ice resting upon our heads. When I was free again I found myself in a sort of cavern, the floor dry and covered with gravel and fine sand. Bijou, already on his feet, jumped about me barking and whining, displeased or uneasy at the position in which he found himself, it was difficult to tell which.

"By the light of my lantern, fortunately unbroken in the all, I began to examine the surroundings, but, sacre Dieu! what did I see stacked upon every side of me? Packages of wheat and sugars, bales of tobacco, wine from Berne, cigars from Vevey, and heaven knows what besides! It was a complete store house, in fact, and evidently a den of Petit Francois in which to hide away the contraband merchandise brought into France. In all there was, perhaps, 2,000 francs' worth, and as the state gave us the right to one-half the confiscated property you can imagine my state of mind. I had scarcely time, however to recover from the amazement which the sight of these things had given me when my duty as sentinel returned to mind; but how was I to get out of this hole, thirty feet at least beneath the surface of the ground, and the walls as smooth as glass? It was impossible to cling to it, and the sweat of agony broke out all over as I thought of Petit Francois and his devilish brothers. If they should return and catch me in this place I was lost. A sling of lead or a knife in the ribs would soon end the business for me.

"In vain I groped about the cavern searching right and left; there was no way of getting out—I was caged like an animal, and with my lamp drawing to a close, the wick already leaping and sputtering in its last rays. A moment later, crack! it was out. The darkness of Erebus reigned.

"'In the meantime' I had noticed a sort of cranny or narrow break extending along the base of the wall at the end of the cavern, and I started in that direction, feeling along with my hands. Bijou was there before me!

"It is useless, gentlemen, to describe to you what I felt regarding this strange and perilous adventure. It is always painful to die at 25—and then, what a death!

"Even my carbine remained upon the path above me—instead of defending it would expose me. My poor old mother! I was her only child. I had sent her my pay by the driver of the Nyon diligence just the evening before, and she had only this pay to live upon. And Rosette, who would come to the chalet of Trelasse the following night to meet me—Rosette whom I loved, and who returned that love!

"Think of it, gentlemen, the cruelty of this fate; and I had only been in that devilish post of Cure three months, all told. But it is useless to speak of that, or to tell you of the fears, the regrets and memories that threw me into a sort of torpor. I was benumbed, stupefied, and at last fell asleep.

"Suddenly I awoke with a start. I had heard a voice that to me had the sound of hell. It was the voice of Petit Francois speaking to his brothers.

"'The spy is down there, of course,' said he; 'but no matter; in any case we must try the fire, and smoke him out. Tune up the violins!' Then all was silence!

"A man in the hour of approaching death has such need of tenderness and affection that I wished even to embrace for the last time my little Bijou; but where was he? I felt all around me, I called him softly; he was gone—my only friend had disappeared!

"The silence continued perhaps for half an hour. Mechanically grasping the handle of my sword, I waited in the darkness, determined to sell my life as dearly as possible in case they should unexpectedly invade the cavern by an entrance known only to themselves.

"See my hair, gentlemen, white as the driven snow, and I am not yet 40 years of age! It comes from that awful experience. God keep you from suffering the like!

"But all at once," the gendarme continued, "the place was filled with a flash of light—Petit Francois and his brothers had begun their infernal work—they were smoking me out! To leave my hiding place behind the bales of merchandise and endeavor to extinguish the brands would only be presenting myself as a target for their revolvers. On the other hand, the acrid smoke of the burning boughs filled my throat and stopped my breathing. My ears already rung and roared with the noise of a thousand devils.

"At last I could stand it no longer, and cried for mercy.

"'Do not burn me, Petit Francois,' I begged; 'do not burn me, for I surrender. Kill me afterward if you please, but air—for the love of God, give me air!'

"'Then it is you, Abram,' he replied; 'you, the spy! So much the better. I long ago reserved you for a morsel for the dogs. But, draw him up, boys; draw him to the top. I want to see the grimaces he'll make when we hang him to the branches. Let down a rope; he'll cling to it fast enough. And be sure,' he added, in a lower tone of voice, 'that no one else is there.'

"A moment later the rope descended, and, like the drowning man who clings to a straw, I was not long in seizing and lashing myself to it, for, between two deaths one is certain to choose that which is farthest off. 'Pull up!' cried Petit Francois, but scarcely had I reached the level of the path when he rushed upon me, upset me and bound me hand and foot, and with these never to be loosened knots of the contrabandists.

"'Now, children,' said he, 'we must decamp from here and as quickly as possible. Recover the opening with pine boughs and snow, and then, Monsieur Abram, we will take you for a promenade.'

"The entrance to the cavern again concealed, Petit Francois slackened the cords which bound my feet enough for me to walk, hung upon my back and neck a bundle of merchandise and ordered me to fall in line and 'carry' like a beast of burden. Ah, how those scoundrels laughed and jeered as they prodded me along with the ends of their carbines! You may not think it from the position I was in, but I began to have a little hope. There was a chance, you see—a slight one, it is true—that some of my colleagues would be on sentry at a narrow defile not far from the hollow of the Cronaz, where there was a sort of breach in the wall for concealment.

"The contrabandists evidently had the same reflection, for they turned to the right and continued the ascent by a more circuitous passage, but which would bring us in rear of any one on guard at that point. It was now in the neighborhood of 3 o'clock. We walked for an hour longer, when Petit Francois called a halt, and, taking the package I had carried since we left the hollow, he concealed it in a crevice of the rocks which overhung the side.

"'Take a look at your gibbet, Abram,' he cried, with a mocking laugh. 'You cannot say that I have chosen it badly,' and he pointed toward a monster pine tree occupying the center of the clearing, whose branches, thick as ordinary tree trunks, extended from the sides like the arms of a huge candelabra.

"'All summer long the tourists of the mountains will come to call upon you as you came to call upon me—for which, my pretty blackbird,' approaching me with curses, 'you will hang up there.'

"If you had seen the face of that monster, his lips trembling with rage, his hands as big as battledores, and covered with rough and hairy skin, you would have known at once that prayers and appeals to his mercy would simply have been time thrown away. It only remained for me to die, and to die bravely for the honor of my division.

"'Put up the rope, Louis,' Francois called to his brother; 'tie it to one of the lower branches; while waiting we will amuse ourselves with the gentleman who explores so well.'

"The amusement of Petit Francois consisted in binding me securely to the trunk of a tree, after which he took off his coat, rolled up his sleeves, and arranging himself some twenty paces in front of me, went to work to make a target of me, the missiles used being heavy, jagged stones which his brother collected for him beneath the cliffs. The first stone missed me, but gradually, as Francois warmed to his work and aimed with greater precision, they began to tell. One broke my wrist; another buried itself in my ribs; the third crushed my nose, knocked out my teeth and tore the flesh from my cheeks.

"'From this on I knew no more.—I had fainted away.'

"When I came to myself again I was resting against the pine that was to have been my gibbet; Bijou was licking the blood from my face, and before me, lying on the snow, two dead bodies—Petit Francois and my own corporal. The lieutenant who had been on guard at the Villemay bent over me, rubbing me as hard as he could, trying to restore me to consciousness.

"'Do not talk, Abram,' said he, as I struggled to speak; 'the villains have their deserts, and have decamped with a shot in their wings. They cannot go far; as for the corporal, he is done for, Francois also. My bayonet went through his lungs. You were in a bad way, my lad, when we got to you; but I must go to Saint Bergues for aid. Bijou, who saved you, will stay with you. I will wrap you in this heavy blanket, and you will do well till my return. Here is a loaded revolver; if those scoundrels return and approach you pepper them well.'

"In due time he returned with re-enforcements and litters. They placed me on one of them, and the corporal and Petit Francois on the other. The lieutenant, after seeing that I was safely dispatched to the post at Cure, departed in search of the contrabandist's brothers. They were caught on the frontier of France, tried and sentenced to the galleys for life.

"'I was three months in the hospital of the Good Samaritans, and when I came out of it my face was so ugly that Rosette, my fiancee, would have nothing to do with me, and married the grocer of Des Rousses, a well known receiver of stolen goods, though we could never prove it.

"'The government stitched a stripe upon the coat sleeve of the lieutenant, a greater gratification than a 100 franc bill, and allowed to the widow of the corporal half the value of the merchandise which I had discovered in the cavern.

"'As for myself I was made appointe, and shall always remain so; I am too ugly and too much disfigured to care to be anything else. Bijou, my savior, as the lieutenant called him, had succeeded in crawling through the crevice at the base of the cavern wall, and running to the post of Cure had found it deserted by all save the sentry. Returning toward the Crouaz, he had followed the trail of the lieutenant and corporal, who, suspecting that a misfortune had happened, started out to find me.

"'The gendarme corps of Vaud have had him christened "Bijou D'Or," and presented him with a cross of gold, which, as you see, gentlemen, hangs from his collar.

"'The cavern of Petit Francois is now known as "Pollechaud" in honor of my adventure."—Translated for The Enquirer from the French of Hugues Miller-Darier, by E. C. Waggoner.

Accident.

Mr. A. G. Day, foreman in Mr. Weiler's factory, received a letter yesterday informing him that his brother, a young man well known in this city, had sustained serious injuries through falling from a building in Eugene City, Oregon. His arm was fractured in three places and a number of ribs were broken.

Obituary.

Mrs. Mary Batchelor, mother of Messrs William and Job Batchelor, (the latter a resident of New Westminster) died after a long and painful illness at the residence of the former this morning. Deceased came to Victoria with her son William eight years ago, and has been a resident of this city ever since.

Accident in Rogers Pass.

A bridge carpenter named Storey, formerly of Pictou, Nova Scotia, fell off a bridge near Rogers Pass on Monday and rolled down a slope, some forty feet into the stream below, sustaining a fracture of the skull and other injuries. He was brought to the hospital at Donald where he now lies in a very critical condition.

The Opium Case.

Officials in San Francisco, says a press dispatch of the 29th, state with reference to the dispatch from Victoria to the effect that a gigantic scheme for smuggling opium over the Northern frontier as bonded baggage, a passenger accompanying the same to make the deception complete, has been exposed, that no baggage has been bonded at this port as described in the telegram. They are satisfied that no such shipments can occur without the collusion of some customs officers, or by a system of substitution and use of counterfeit seals.

Musical Convention.

The R. B. George company are evidently doing a good work for our people in Victoria. Yesterday afternoon and evening the meetings of the musical convention were held in the Pandora street Presbyterian Church; fifty names have been enrolled. Our church choirs will compare favorable with other choirs, still there is room for improvement, and no better opportunity has ever been offered for instruction. The R. B. George Co. and chorus class, with 50 little ladies in a doll brigade, will give a grand concert in Victoria Theatre, Saturday evening of this week. All should attend.

Vancouver and Edinburgh.

Now-a-days we hear much about the acreage area of new and rising cities. Instances are given of such cities as Winnipeg, Emerson, Brandon, Moberley—which, by the way, never existed but on paper—and other places rendered notorious by real estate booms. If we are not mistaken the acreage of Vancouver is about 6,000 acres. The acreage of Edinburgh is stated at 6,002, and the length of the streets 130 miles. There are 42,413 inhabited houses. Fifty constables are employed in special duties, 433 in ordinary duties. The total cost of the police is £45,049, but £7,992 is received for special services.

Black and Tan Cigars.

The Thames Championship.

By cablegram from England the news has come to hand that the most important boat race of the year in England, for the championship of the Thames, (Wingfield sculls) has been won easily, by 35 seconds, by Mr. Guy Nickalls, of Pembroke College, Oxford, one of the Oxford University eight this year. Mr. Nickalls is a brother of Mrs. Baillie-Grohman, now residing in this city.

We Said So.

Word has been received in this city of the marriage of Mr. W. E. Osterhout, the genial proprietor of the Brunswick Hotel of this city, at Wellington, Prince Edward County, Ont., on the 21st ult. The happy couple are on their way to this city via New York and overland to San Francisco. At the time of his departure for the east THE TIMES hinted that a double ticket would be required for the return trip.

Business is Business.

The Melbourne Argus says: "There is no objection at all to abandoning the present San Francisco contract for a Canadian service. On the contrary, Australia ought to make a financial sacrifice to promote the change—a change which means an American route through British territory; but on the other hand, we cannot afford to check the development of the Cape and Canal routes, which are giving us the magnificent new vessels of the Peninsular and Oriental and Orient lines. Sentiment is sentiment, and we value the Canadian-Australian sentiment highly. But business is business."

The Mexico's Cargo.

Says a press dispatch, to the eastern journals, of last Friday, from San Francisco: The Canadian Pacific managed to secure about 150 tons of eastern freight out of this city for shipment by the Mexico, which sailed for Victoria to-day. Shipments include the following, which is fairly illustrative of the business taken by the foreign line out of California territory; for Chicago, 160 barrels of salmon and 842 boxes and 348 sacks of dried fruit; for Boston, 310 barrels of salmon; for New York, 723 boxes of dried fruit; for St. Louis, 30,100 pounds of beans; for Sioux City, Iowa, 30,657 pounds of sugar.

Another Steam Collier.

Walter S. Moore, of San Francisco, cabled his agent in that city a few days since that he had purchased the steamer Emilius, 2100 tons burden, no price was stated. The vessel is 250 feet over all, 36 feet 5 inches beam, and was built at Sunderland in 1884. The vessel is schooner-rigged, has two compound condensing engines, and registered on a trial trip a speed of 12 knots an hour. She will take an assorted cargo at Liverpool for San Pedro about August 25th. She will be rechristened the Southern California on her arrival here, and will be used as a collier between British Columbia and San Pedro.

Railway Notes.

The Canadian Pacific Railway Company earnings and expenses for June, 1887, were: Gross earnings, $1,059,507; working expenses, $670,803; net profits, $488,703. In June, 1886, there was a net profit of $376,449, and for six months ending June 30, 1887, figures are as follows: Gross earnings, $4,728,793; working expenses, $3,787,456; net profits, $941,337. For six months ending 30th June, 1886, there was a net profit of $1,293,615.

All the overland lines are working for Grand Army travel to St. Louis. Tickets to that city and return are being sold at $67.50. One of the roads will give a free side trip to Salt Lake City, going out by way of Denver and returning by way of Omaha and the Union Pacific.

"Kentucky Smile" chewing tobacco is the finest tobacco manufactured, and will last longer than cheap tobacco. J. B. Pace Tobacco Co., Richmond, Va. *

The Minister of the Interior.

A dispatch from Donald yesterday announces that the Hon. Thos. White and party arrived there from Banff that evening and left by the regular train this (Tuesday) morning for Vancouver, where it is expected they will arrive on Thursday morning and this city the same evening. Accompanying Mr. White is his wife and Miss Bella White. Mr. C. H. Hosmer, Superintendent of the C. P. R. telegraph, is also one of the party. Mr. White will arrange land matters at Kamloops, Westminster and other points, at each of which places he will remain a few days. Nanaimo will also be visited. Mrs. and Miss White will remain in Victoria for some time. At New Westminster Mr. Hosmer parts company with Mr. White and will go overland to San Francisco inspecting the postal telegraph system.

"Escort" and "Kentucky Smile" chewing tobaccos are especially put up for Pacific Coast trade by J. B. Pace Tobacco Co., Richmond, Va. *

Cobble Hill Stone.

By advertisement in another column it will be observed that Messrs. Mortimer & Innes are prepared to deliver stone in rough, dressed, or partly so, to builders, contractors and others either in this or any other city in the province. This stone will unquestionably become a very popular and profitable one for parties building. Since its discovery it has been subjected to the severest possible test by chemicals and other processes. Not a particle of scales could be discovered or wearing away in weight. That it will become general for foundation purposes goes without saying. It can be delivered and laid much cheaper than can brick, whilst the lasting qualities are not to be compared. Such, at all events, is the opinion of those competent to judge. It is of the same formation and quality as is the Craigleith gray sandstone, of which the Scott monument, Princess street, Edinburgh, is built, and which has withstood all atmospheric influences and variations for many years. Give the firm a call and examine the samples on hand.

Just try a piece of "Escort," or "Kentucky Smile" chewing tobacco and you will be satisfied they are fine. Sold everywhere. *

Cricket on the Mainland.

A cricket match was played on the recreation ground, Vancouver, on Saturday last between teams representing Canada and the Old Country. A large number of spectators were present to witness the game and evinced a lively interest in it throughout. The Old Countrymen won by an innings and twenty-two runs. The Canadians went first to the wickets but could do nothing against the bowling of Clinton, who got seven wickets for eleven runs with the exception of Kana, who got twelve runs in good style. The Old Countrymen going in to bat lost three wickets for five runs, but when Nelson and Garrioch got together they put a different face on the game and completely tired out the bowlers. Nelson played a splendid innings of 32 before he was caught out. Garrioch played careful for his seven. The innings closed for fifty-nine runs, Kana and Schofield bowled well. On the Canadians going in a second time they were all dismissed for nine runs. They could do nothing with the bowling of Clinton and Prenter, the latter's analysis being grand—7 overs, 3 maidens, 5 runs, 6 wickets. Score: Canadians, 1st innings, 27; 2nd innings, 9; Old Country, 1st innings, 59.

RANKS THINNING OUT.

Another Old and Esteemed Pioneer Passes Away.

For some days back it has been known that Major Ronald J. McDonell was so seriously ill that little or no hope for his recovery was held out by his medical attendants. Gradually his sands of life began to scatter, and at 4:30 yesterday afternoon, without a struggle, surrounded by his wife and relatives, he breathed his last, surrendering his spirit to the God who gave it. The event although expected created a general feeling of sympathy for the family of the deceased. With the death of Major McDonell another of the ancient land marks of Victoria disappeared, for few citizens were better known or more highly esteemed amongst his fellow citizens than the subject of this memoir. He was third son of Capt. John McDonell, who retired from the army at the close of the Peninsular war in consequence of ill health; and a great grand son of the Macdonald of Kepoch, who was beheaded after the famous battle of Culloden, and the last of the race of the great and mighty clans of the North and Western Isles who controlled and commanded an army of their own. Major McDonell was a nephew of the late Admiral Sir James Gordon, for many years Governor of Greenwich Hospital. He received his commission in the army in 1832, having graduated from Sandhurst. He sold out in 1840 as captain in the 28th regiment, in order that he might devote his attention to the business of sheep ranching in Australia. For many years he was police magistrate of Maitland, N. S. W., and subsequently held various appointments under the government in the colony of New Zealand under his friend and college mate Sir George Grey. The Major was twice married; his first wife being a sister of Capt. McLean who for many years was Supt. of Convict's colony, in New South Wales, known as Van Dieman's land. He died many years ago. His second wife, and she who now mourns the loss of so devoted a husband, companion and friend as he has proved himself to be, is a daughter of the late William Wilmington, Yeovil, Sommersetshire, England. He leaves no children of his own behind him to mourn his loss. His step-children were as dear and devoted to him as it were possible for them to be were they his own. The California gold excitement of 1849 brought him to this coast. In California his success was indifferent. The breaking out of the Fraser River gold fever of 1858 brought him hither to Victoria, and here he has remained ever since. Mr. Alex. Phillips, of this city, possibly knew him longer than any other man living, having been personally acquainted with him since 1852, over 35 years. The news of his death will be received with regret by all who knew him. By nature, disposition and manner he was, in every sense of the term, a perfect gentleman. In his youthful days he spent much of his time in Glenlynn, Perthshire, Scotland. His birth place was in the Shetland Isles, from which his parents removed whilst he was in his tender years. In this city, after his arrival, he was clerk for J. D. Pemberton, Esq., then a justice and stipendiary magistrate. Deceased was by connection a Roman Catholic. He was also a Mason in good standing order with the craft in this city, being amongst the eldest of the brethren of the mystic tie. To-morrow afternoon, at 3 o'clock, the remains will be conveyed to their last resting place from the Masonic Temple, Douglas and Fisgard streets, under the auspices of the Masonic fraternity of the city, and to which an invitation is extended to all members of the craft, whether residents or sojourners, to attend.

The military will also take part in the obsequies. The following "District Order" has been issued:

Headquarters, Military Dist., No. 11, Victoria, 1st August, 1887.

In consequence of the death of Major McDonell, district paymaster and superintendent of stores of this military district, the troops at headquarters are requested to parade at the drill shed at 8 p. m. on Tuesday 2nd inst., preparatory to forming a military escort at the funeral, which is to take place on Wednesday the 3rd inst.

From B. C. to Palestine.

The lecture delivered last night in the Pandora Street Methodist Church by the Rev. Hugh Johnston, B.D., of Toronto, was a most instructive literary treat. The subject chosen was "slices of travel from the mountains of British Columbia to those that are about Jerusalem." The chair was occupied by the Rev. J. E. Starr, who introduced the reverend lecturer to the audience. He gave a most vivid description of his travels on the continent of Europe and in the holy land every inch of which to the Christian was hallowed ground, especially that in the vicinity of Jerusalem, the city of the Great King David. He compared the scenery in the mountains of this province to that of Switzealand and our skies to those of Italy. Reference was also made to the former visit by the late Rev. Dr. Morley Punshon and himself to Victoria several years ago. He was pleased to observe the progress the country was making and hoped to hear of its future onward course being greater than ever. He paid a graceful tribute to the energy and perseverance of the promoters of the Canadian Pacific Railway. From first to last he kept his audience spell bound with his graphic and beautiful word painting of the various places and scenes to be encountered in a trip to the Holy Land. No abridged report of the lecture can convey to our readers a correct conception of the instructiveness of its matter or the beauty of the language employed, the ease and grace with which the reverend lecturer handled his subject and for which at the close he was accorded a hearty vote of thanks moved by Mr. John Jessop, seconded by the Rev. Dr. Reid.

Free Concerts.

The free concerts by the Wizard Oil Company at the corner of Douglas and Yates streets, have been attended nightly by many hundreds of people. The lady and gentlemen composing the company, and even the private wagon in which they ride, have an air of respectability about them which at once inspires confidence and commands the respectful attention of the populace. They are all excellent singers, and their repertoire of songs seems to be as inexhaustible as are the merits of the oil or the ability of the agreeable little doctor to expound its virtues. We have attended many dollar concerts not half so pleasing or edifying. The whole entertainment is well worth hearing, and is a thoroughly gentlemanly exposition of the beauties of music, medicine, human anatomy and Wizard Oil. We believe the company will remain here for the balance of the week, so that music and Wizard Oil may be had up to Saturday night.

SUNDAY CLOSING.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE TIMES:

SIR,—It seems to us, that we in this city are periodically afflicted with importations coming from the lord knows where, and after some time going where nobody seems to care, whose bete noir is the liquor dealers of this city in particular. Whether it is the itinerant whose chief object is passing round the hat, or a delegated moralist from some synod in the eastern provinces, their role is the same—an attack on a respectable portion of this community, a portion the majority of whom, are the most law abiding and pushing men in the place. * * * The petition relative to Sunday closing was hawked round, I should judge, (because it is generally women of the type, found in the front of any movement of the kind) by sour visaged and childless, soured perchance through the lack of those domestic ties known to the happier wives and mothers of our glorious province.

We venture to say that out of the 900 signatures to the petition relative to Sunday closing two-thirds of them are the signatures of women and children, or of men who conservatively should not have the least influence in the city. We care not if they close up forever every business mart in the city and make it as silent as a tomb at midnight, if it is a just thing to do. But this principle we battle for, that it is contrary to the spirit of the age, that any man, or set of men, shall dictate to others their own particular way of observing any one day of the week. What, forsooth, if we crave a glass of beer on Sunday? Because our neighbor, in his pharisaical extreme of thinking, deems it a sin, must his narrow and fanatical theories govern and coerce us. The laws that govern our modern civilization are so framed for individual preservation that to indulge to extremes in any one thing till that indulgence becomes a nuisance is punishable by those laws. We wonder if these strainers at gnats ever think that they themselves are nuisances there is no necessity here, neither do we desire any approach to the laws of the old puritan fathers that were at once the most tyrannical and the most inquisitorial of any that ever cursed a community. If there are any here desiring such a regime, let them seek a more congenial locality.

ONE THOUSAND OF US.

OUT WITH THE TRUTH.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE TIMES:

SIR,—It is said that the Provincial Secretary is unjustly blamed for the selection of a most inconvenient site for the new ward school. I have it on good authority that he previously consulted the late chairman and secretary of the Trustee Board, (Mr. Higgins,) Mr. Hayward, Dr. Milne, and other trustees before the selection. If this be true, the gentlemen referred to are acting in a very cowardly spirit in allowing Mr. Robson to bear all the odium of having bought the site through Mr. Heisterman, a land agent, who is also Secretary to the Board.

JUSTICE.

Family Jars.

A family feud at Esquimalt on Sunday night came near ending seriously. Cause—jealousy for cause; result—a row in which a gun might have been used and was taken in hand for that purpose. Better counsels, however, prevailed.

From M. Sullivan, M. D., President of the Medical Association of Canada: Kingston, Oct. 19, 1883.—From conversations with Mr. Laurance, examination of his accurate, varied and highly finished glasses, together with observation of cases benefitted, I have pleasure in strongly recommending him as a gentleman worthy of entire confidence.
